Letter from the Program Manager

Dear Virginians,

In 2007, The Virginia Department of Social Services (VDSS), Office of Family Violence (OFV), had the privilege of being a part of some remarkable projects taking place across the state. Our priority was administering the funds and contracts for the state domestic violence coalition, as well as 46 local domestic violence programs.

As we traveled throughout the state performing site visits with local domestic violence programs, experienced programs providing a safe haven and critically needed services to the victims of abuse, as well as their children. Because programs protect the identity of those using their services and shelter locations are typically kept confidential, members of the community are not able to see the collaborative work that is being done. When reporting on domestic violence, the media too often focuses on the violence that victims encounter but not the day to day services that are offered to families as they are putting their lives back together.

With a growing population of non-English speaking residents, we saw many of Virginia's domestic violence programs develop simple translation services for crisis intervention while others now offer full multi-cultural, bi-lingual programs. The excellent services being offered to some of our immigrant communities is an example of programs meeting ever changing needs. Other new services focused on children and youth who have experienced domestic violence.

Sometimes the most needed services were not crisis oriented at all. Rebuilding lives also means trips to the grocery store, preparing for job interviews, help with homework, and perhaps applying for social services, as families prepare for new beginnings and a violence free life. Non-crisis work remains critical to the success of the families receiving services from domestic violence programs.

In 2007, the OFV continued to raise public awareness statewide through the "Domestic Violence - It's Closer Than You Think" educational outreach campaign. Ads featuring images of everyday, culturally diverse people were carried on billboards throughout Virginia, reminding the public that domestic violence can, and does, affect us all.

Measuring program success in domestic violence work is difficult. Comprehensive statistics are often not available to demonstrate how lives were impacted through the commitment of domestic violence staff, interns and volunteers. Over the next year, new outcome measures will be introduced to measure more accurately the impact of Virginia's domestic violence services on those using them. We will be reporting this new information to you in the future.

We look forward to continuing our work and collaborating with our community partners at the state level and in every locality in Virginia. Thank you for working with us to provide the needed services to victims of domestic violence and their children.

In Peace,

Nancy P. Fowler

FACT

The Office of Family Violence's goal is to empower victims of domestic violence.

Mission

The Virginia Department of Social Services (VDSS) provides assistance to citizens of Virginia to help them live their best lives. One child, one senior citizen, one person at a time, VDSS programs and services help people triumph over poverty, abuse and neglect, achieve self-sufficiency and shape strong futures for themselves, their families and their communities.

The Office of Family Violence (OFV) funds local public and private non-profit domestic violence programs whose mission and purpose are to address the issue of domestic violence within their community and respond to the needs of all people in that community who have experienced and/or been impacted by domestic violence.

OFV values the provision of consistent reliable services for victims and children in every locality of the Commonwealth. The Office of Family Violence's goals are to empower victims of domestic violence, help every family feel safe, find the resources needed to thrive and educate communities on the effects of domestic violence.

Background and Authority

The Code of Virginia, Sections 63.2-1611 to 63.2-1615, assigns VDSS the responsibility to coordinate and manage domestic violence prevention efforts across the state. VDSS is responsible for:

- Acting as the administering agent for state grant funds for community programs seeking to establish service programs for the victims of domestic violence
- Developing and maintaining a statewide list of available community and state resources for victims of domestic violence
- Encouraging the use of existing information and referral agencies to provide specialized information on domestic violence
- Preparing, disseminating and presenting educational programs and materials on domestic violence to the local departments, community provider agencies, and the general public
- Promoting interagency cooperation for technical assistance, data collection, and service delivery

Mission and Vision

- Providing a clearinghouse for information exchange about domestic violence
- Providing technical assistance to establish shelters, self-help groups, and other necessary service delivery programs

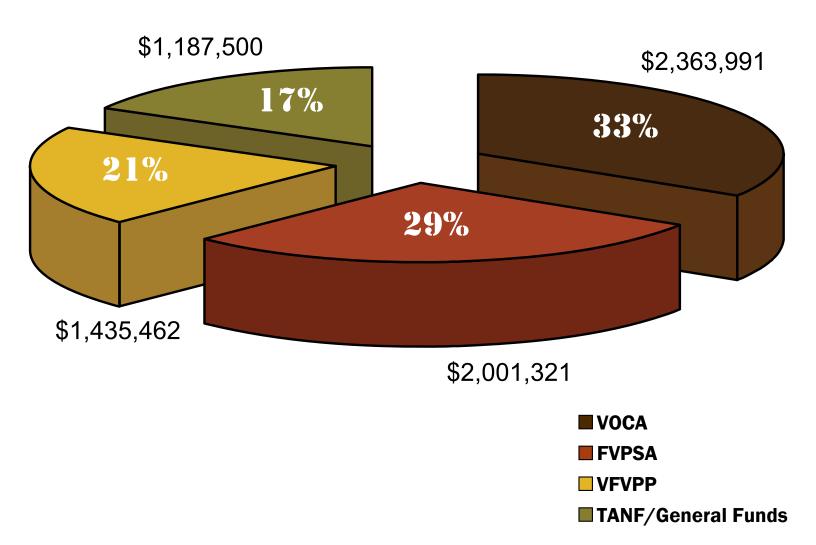

To accomplish these goals, VDSS administers the OFV and specific efforts include:

- Collaborating with domestic violence programs and other stakeholders to educate every Virginian about domestic violence and the services that are available to victims
- Coordinating with other stakeholders for a coordinated community response to domestic violence
- Educating the public about domestic violence through awareness programs
- Encouraging local departments of social services to incorporate information about domestic violence into service provision
- Funding domestic violence programs throughout the Commonwealth

Funding for State Fiscal Year 2007

In FY 07, VDSS awarded $ 6.7 million to local and statewide domestic violence programs. This total includes funding from the Victims of Crime Act (VOCA), the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA), the Virginia Family Violence Prevention Program (VFVPP), and from the Temporary Assistance to Needy Families (TANF)/General Funds Program. These four funding sources support 46 local domestic violence programs in Virginia and one statewide coalition with grants ranging from $24,331.00 to $573,373.00.

The chart below reflects the distribution of funding by funding stream managed through VDSS:

FACT

VDSS has the responsibility to coordinate and manage domestic violence prevention efforts across the state.

OFV Program Activities

In 2007, thousands of Virginians in abusive relationships were helped through the Virginia Family Violence and Sexual Assault Hotline or one of Virginia's local domestic violence programs. These programs are free and confidential and provide 24-hour hotlines, advocacy, shelter, education, prevention, and training activities throughout the state.

Enhancements in the information and services the OFV provided to domestic violence programs included:

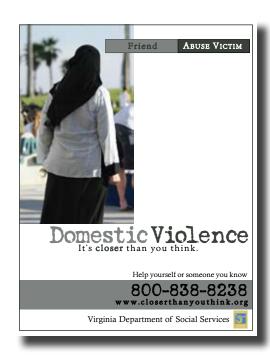

- Technical support to 46 domestic violence programs and one statewide coalition within Virginia.
- Participation in the development of the new accreditation process for domestic and sexual violence programs. The criteria were approved by the full membership of the Virginia Sexual and Domestic Violence Action Alliance. Funding accredited programs will be a priority for OFV in the future.
- Coordination of a domestic violence and culture roundtable discussion during Domestic Violence Awareness Month. The roundtable included eight panelists from various cultural and religious backgrounds who talked about how domestic violence is portrayed in their communities, and what cultural issues should be considered when working with victims of domestic violence from different backgrounds.

- Educational awareness and outreach through the statewide implementation of the "It's Closer Than You Think" campaign. Approximately 28,000 pamphlets. 45,000 palm cards, 1,000 posters and 12,000 flyers were sent out to local domestic violence programs, local departments of health, clinics, and community organizations around the Commonwealth. Campaign images were displayed on billboards during October and November. Samples of this campaign can be viewed at http://www.closerthanyouthink.org.
- Formation of a Confidentiality Committee to develop model policies for domestic and sexual violence service providers Virginia. This committee consists of local domestic and sexual violence programs, the Office of Family Violence, the Virginia Sexual and Domestic Violence Action Alliance and several other state agencies. The committee will send out a selfassessment that is based on current identified best practices. With this information the committee will be more aware of Virginia's current practices regarding confidentiality and can proceed in developing a relevant and useful model policy to protect the needs of victims in Virginia.

Statistics

Domestic Violence

This chart data was collected from the Virginia Data Collection System, VAdata.

Outcome Measures

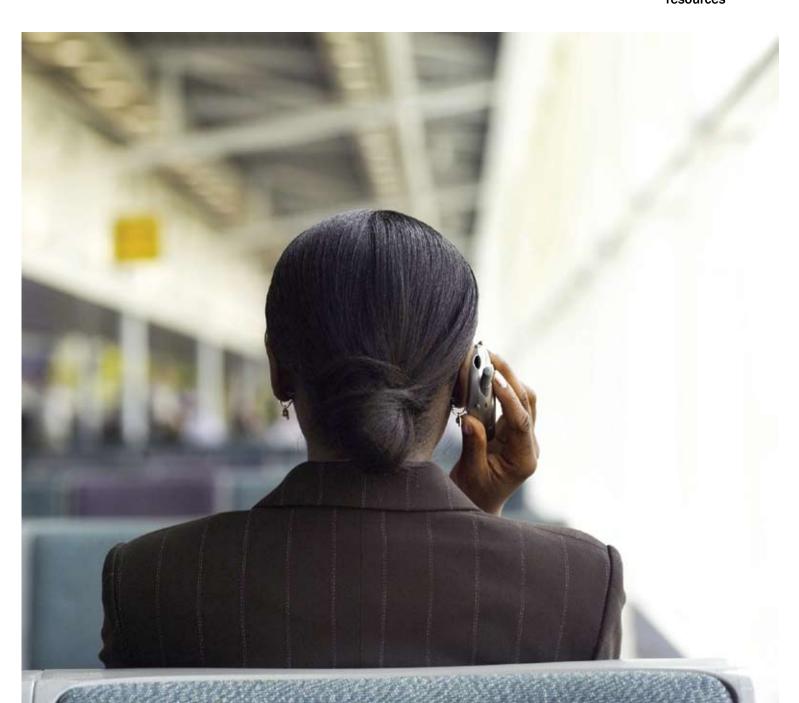

Outcome measures document the condition of clients after a service has been provided e.g. increased skills, modified behavior, improved condition. Outcome measures address qualitative outcomes.

The following outcome measures have been used by the OFV for three years. Programs report on these measures quarterly through the use of VAdata. Each measure shows dramatic improvement this year over the first year. The measures indicate that the work of local advocates does make a difference in the lives of the victims with whom they work. They have known this for 25 years, but these measures quantify it.

- 86% Of callers to the hotline making victim-related calls were more informed about the dynamics of domestic violence and services available through domestic violence programs.
- 81% Of survivors requesting shelter were protected from violence and abuse from the perpetrator by the arrangement for or provision of shelter.
- 79% Of domestic violence survivors who called the hotline were given referrals to community resources to increase their capacity to acquire resources needed to live a violence-free life.
- 72% Of domestic violence survivors were able to identify their safety options through participation in the development of a safety plan.

FACT

Domestic Violence survivors can call the statewide hotline and be given referrals to community resources

Trends

Across the Commonwealth

The Office of Family Violence receives valuable information from quarterly reports that are submitted by local domestic violence programs. Trends that are described in these reports are particularly useful in seeing what new issues programs face.

Mental Health Issues

Several domestic violence programs expressed concerns about providing services to victims who have mental health issues. The staff has noticed an increase in referrals from mental health professionals for clients with professionally diagnosed mental health issues beyond depression and post-traumatic stress disorder. Local programs report that it is becoming more difficult to provide services to these clients without compromising the safety of the shelter staff, the other clients and their children as well as the clients with mental health issues

Lack of Affordable Housing

Another continuing issue in the Commonwealth is a lack of affordable housing in many of the communities where the domestic violence programs are located. During FY 07, domestic violence programs in Virginia provided shelter for 3073 families. Only 427 (14 percent) of those families moved into self-supported housing. 724 (24 percent) families went to stay with family and friends, and 182 families (six percent) moved into transitional housing. The lack of affordable housing poses a major problem for clients who are seeking a safe and stable living environment. Program staff note that most residents find it difficult if not impossible to find affordable housing, especially with only one income in the home.

Job Readiness

Programs are beginning to address the need for skills development for their clients. Programs note that job readiness, the ability to do effective job searches, resume building and interviewing are all skills that clients need, but cannot always receive through the domestic violence program. Related to professional skills development, programs also note that they have more clients coming into shelter who request training on money management, credit scores and repair, and banking skills.

Immigration Services

Programs note that they are beginning to familiarize themselves with resources that will help them to better serve immigrant populations, but there is still a lot to learn. Language and cultural barriers pose the largest challenges to programs. By using the bilingual staff, the community translators and the Language Line, some communication can be made with victims who have limited English proficiency.

Underserved Populations

Underserved populations served by local domestic violence programs also include older victims of domestic violence, those who live in rural areas, those living with disabilities and the gay and lesbian community. Programs agree that more outreach needs to be done to reach these groups, and that programs need to be better equipped with resources and training to help these specialized populations.

National Census of Domestic Violence Services

45 out of 46 local Virginia domestic violence programs participated in the National Census of Domestic Violence Services on November 2, 2006. With the safety and confidentiality needs of victims in the forefront of the planning, the Census conducted an unduplicated, non-invasive count of adults and children who received services from local programs during a 24 hour period. The results were striking.

Trends

During the 24 hour survey period, 1,162 adults and children received services from Virginia domestic violence programs.

In fact,

- 438 adults and children found refuge in emergency domestic violence shelters.
- 145 adults and children were living in transitional housing programs designed specifically for domestic violence survivors.
- 579 adults and children sought non-residential advocacy and services such as individual counseling, legal advocacy, and children's support groups.

The 2007 Census was conducted on September 25, 2007. Thirty eight out 46 programs participated and in the 24 hour survey period, 1,035 adults and children received services from domestic violence programs in the Commonwealth. During this period, there were 178 unmet requests for services and, according to the National Network to End Domestic Violence, "programs reported that lack of staffing was a reason that they could not meet victims' requests for services." In addition, during the 24 hour survey period,

- 545 adults and children found refuge in emergency domestic violence shelters or transitional housing.
- 490 adults and children received non-residential services, including individual counseling, legal advocacy and children's support groups.
- 586 hotline calls were answered by domestic violence program staff.
